CHICAGO, Aug. 14,-A convention of the Afro-American Conneil of Colored Men will be held at Bethel church ho ginning Wednesday and lasting until Saturday evening. This convention will probably be one of the most important gatherings of colored men that have been held for some time. It is expected that a fight will result over the resolutions which it is promised will be introduced denouncing President McKinley for not using the federal authority to prevent lynchings in the south. There is no doubt that resolutions of this import will be brought before the convention, and to that end the forces on both sides are already lining up. The faction which will support the resolutions will, it is understood, take the ground that the broad humanitarien line should be drawn, that lynchings should not be tolerated either in Georgia or Illinois and that when the state authorities are unable to prevent the recurrence of such crimes the strong step in, no mutter whether the victim be white or black.

Dan Roby, a boy of 15, replied: "He is my dog, sir."

"Well, put him out! Don't you know better than to bring a dog to school?" "I didn't intend to bring him. He them. They clustered about the door, followed me of his own accord, and I couldn't drive him back. Come, Tige!" Tige refused to go, and Dan had to

Some of the boys girls, fled wildly in all directions, quite and girls laughed, whereupon Jabez terrified by what they had seen. Jordon struck his desk with his fist and said, sternly) "Silencel"

The effect was instantaneous. A pin could have been heard to drop. Tige, in the meantime, was scratching on the closed door and whining for admittance. Five minutes later Dora Harvey, a tardy comer, opened the door to enter the room, and Tige durted in ahead of her, wagging his tail joyfully.

Jabez Jordon scowled ficcely.

"What did you go and let that dog in for?" he demanded of Dora Harvey, who was one of the gentlest and best. girls in the district. The smile on her face gave place to a look of combined fright and amazement. "I-I didn't mean to let him in, air.

He pushed in shead of me when I opened the door," said Dora. "If you'd been here on time wouldn't have happened," said Jabez, Then he turned to Dan.

"Drag him out again and take him home!" he shouted. "This isn't a achool for dogal" Tige was even more unwilling than before to go out, and when Dan approached, ran up and down the sisles, trying to evade capture. In his flight Tige overturned the small wooden box on which the water-pail stood, thereby drenching himself from head to foot with kry water. More laughable still, he caught the descending pail on his head, and could not get it off, the bail having dropped down around his neck. In his frantic writhings, he overturned a small wooden bench on which Tommy Dodge and "Henny" Pope sat, and they in y wig " suddenly lay wailing on their backs in

This hair of his was noticeable for its great abundance and glossiness. It was black, and but lightly touched with gray, although Jabez Jordon was certainly nearly 60 years old. He wore his hair in bushy curls and waves all over his head, and he was almost continually tossing his hair about lightly with the tips of his fingers. It was manifest to the eyes and to the hostrils of his puipls that Jabez Jordan made liberal use of cinnamon-scented hair-oil. Even the girls who disliked the teacher most admitted that he had "awfully pretty hair."

He was very indolent. During the noon hour he compelled the pupils to leave the school room, in order that he Rus shreat on a confuc or toug teet. tation benches and take a nap. Placing two benches side by side, he would roll up his overcoat for a pillow, and stretching his long form out at full length, sleep soundly. Sometimes his snoring could be heard in the school house yard. Several weeks after the school opened there came a day in December which was so unseasonably warm that even the low fire in the big box stove rendered the room so hot that the door and windows were opened. The unusual warmth made the teacher extremely drowsy. He yawned and stretched all the forenoon, and almost fell from his chair once or twice. Hustily eating his luncheon at noon. he placed the two recitation benches together, and bidding one of the pupils to he sure to call him at five minutes before one, stretched himself out on the benches and fell saleep.
